How He Took Care of 'Bad Man" Hull-Popular Chevy Chase Man, Nominated for Maryland Legislature, Favorite of University Athletes Throughout the South.

"Cy" Cummings, of Chevy Chase, farmer, coach of the George Washington baseball team, a former star of the gridfron and amateur diamond, and general all around athlete and good fellow, has been nominated by the Democrats of Montgomery County, Md., as their candidate for the house of delegates.

The announcement yesterday that Andrew J. Cummings was among the successful candidates in the Montgomery County primaries conveyed little to many who have long known "Big Cy" through his association with athletics in the District of Columbia, "Andrew J." being his baptismal name, while "Cv" was selected by his early contemporaries in baseball, owing to his resemblance to Cy Young, of Boston, then in the zenith of his fame. Giantesque, but Good-natured.

"Cy" is 6 feet 51/2 inches in height and weighs 240 pounds. Therefore, as an adversary in an athletic contest he was not to be lightly regarded, as was demonstrated during his career as guard of the Columbian football team of 1898-99, and of Georgetown in 1900.

Good-natured as he is big, however, "Cy" did not take advantage of his though on occasions he has intimated Nearly every Episcopal church in the that it would not be a wise policy to adopt any slugging methods.

This peevishness on his part at the display of rough play by the opposing team was exhibited in a game in 1898 with the Hampton Athletic Club, of Hampton, Va.
